Tima Makes His Own Choice

Tima is getting ready for a walk. Mom offers him a hat, but he chooses the cap with a big button. “I feel like wearing this one today.” Mom puts the hat aside. Either one is suitable for their walk.

If you like: What pattern would you like to add to the cap?

Mila Meets a New Friend

An unfamiliar child is making a road for cars in the sandbox. A bucket on the sand looks like a funny hat. Mila is curious, but she is not ready to come closer. She can watch beside a grown-up, wave, or say hello later.

If you like: How could Mila begin to get to know someone? You could add a detail to the road.

Rain Changes the Plan

The friends had their boots ready when rain began tapping on the window. “I wanted to go to the playground,” says Tima. Mila is disappointed too. A grown-up sits nearby. Later, a fold in the blanket looks like an island. They do not have to invent a new game right now.

If you like: What might the blanket become when the friends feel like playing?